Restorative practices are emerging in higher education.

The University of Hull Masters Degree (MA) in Restorative Justice provides a unique opportunity to study Restorative Justice in depth. It has been developed and will be taught by academics at the forefront of restorative justice scholarship and you can find out more information on the University of Hull's website here

In the UK, Restorative Practices are often being addressed as part of the curriculum in Sociology and Criminal Justice degrees. Below is a link to a document with the courses available in the UK in RJ and related academic fields (updated 2006)

In July 2006, the first Graduate School in Restorative Practices opened in the US.
